

Publishing Policy of the Göttingen University Press

Göttingen, May 2015

Since summer 2003 the University Press of the Georg-August-University Göttingen publishes scholarly literature of disciplines covered by the university. Open Access, e.g. providing free online access to publications, is a guiding principle of the press. In Open Access publishing the rights owners (authors and editors) retain maximum rights to their publications. With its resolution, adopted in 2005, the Georg-August University clearly supports the Open Access principle (tinyurl.com/UGOE-openaccess-2005). The University Press therefore expects its authors to comply with Open Access publishing. In most cases, the press supplements an electronic edition with a printed version available through the book trade. Hybrid publishing improves impact and use of publications showcasing the quality of the publications. Göttingen University Press works on a non-profit basis, expecting a financial contribution from authors to achieve low retail prices and to make Open Access possible. Electronic editions of the University Press are available on the website of the press (univerlag.uni-goettingen.de) and repositories of the University of Göttingen. You will find publications of the category “Universitätsdrucke” on GOEDOC (webdoc.sub.gwdg.de/), the peer-reviewed publications on GoeScholar (goedoc.uni-goettingen.de/goescholar).

Open Access publishing in the Göttingen University Press includes the following aspects:

1. To make the respective work available online the university press needs rights holders (authors and publishers) to transfer certain rights. The press needs permanent and non-exclusive rights to publish an electronic edition in public data networks and on the repositories of the Georg-August-Universität Göttingen. As data formats change over time, the university press also needs the right to migrate. As a protection for the press’ investment into the printed version exclusive rights for print should be transferred. Exceptions are usually possible upon request.
2. Authors and publishers may put the work online in identical form on personal homepages and in subject-specific or institutional repositories, either as a whole or in part. Upon arrangement with the press parts of the work can also be re-printed elsewhere. However reference to the primary publication and the Open Access version should be provided.
3. Publications from the Göttingen University Press are available to the public on repositories of the Georg-August-University. As such, they can be read, downloaded, printed and offered by third-parties. It is not permitted to sell electronic or print copies of the free online version. If the work is licensed under a Creative Commons license their respective agreements apply.
4. Generally all publications of Göttingen University Press are assigned with the Creative Commons License CC BY-SA 4.0 with the obligation of the right attribution and the possibility of sharing alike (<http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-sa/4.0/>). This license makes it possible to integrate metadata and documents (or parts of documents) from Göttingen University Press in commercial services, whereupon the Open-Access provision has to be maintained.

Contact

Jutta Pabst/Margo Bargheer
State and University Library Göttingen
University Press Göttingen
Platz der Göttinger Sieben 1, 37073 Göttingen
tel +49 (0)551 39-5243 or +49 (0)551 39-91188
fax +49 (0)551 39-22457
email: pabst@sub.uni-goettingen.de / bargheer@sub.uni-goettingen.de www.univerlag.uni-goettingen.de